

Door County Fall Information

The fall colors in Door County are an exquisite seen as nature transitions to cooler weather and shorter days. The colors are their most brilliant in the middle part of October each year. Due to the fact that Door County consists of a long narrow peninsula that span nearly 70 miles from south to north, true peak fall colors can usually be seen for at least a week or more. Peak colors typically occur in the northern part of the county first, starting on Washington Island and working their way down the peninsula from north to south as the fall season progresses.

DOOR COUNTY FALL ACTIVITIES

- One of the most popular ways to experience Door County's fall color is to take the Door County circle tour. This self-guided tour takes visitors up one side of the peninsula, over to Washington Island via the Death's Door water passage, then back down the other side of the peninsula. The tour could technically be completed in a day, but ideally it should be spread out over at least a few days to really be able to explore the entire county. The Door County Coastal Byway is part of this route.
- Take a scenic fall color tour aboard the Door County Trolley during the day or hop aboard for one of their popular evening Door County Ghost Tours for some great ghost stories.
- Enjoy a birds-eye view of the breathtaking fall colors and shoreline on a scenic airplane tour with Grizzly Scenic Air Tours based out of Cherryland Airport in Sturgeon Bay.
- Experience Door County's 300 miles of shoreline on a fall color boat tour. Door County offers more than a dozen different boat tour opportunities all over the peninsula.
- Climb to the top of Cana Island Lighthouse (one of 11 lighthouses in Door County) for breathtaking views of the fall colors and surrounding Lake Michigan shoreline.
- Rent a kayak or take a guided kayak tour (kayaks, safety equipment & instruction included) to paddle your way along the scenic Door County coastline for some great fall color viewing.
- Climb to the top of one of our lookout towers in Door County for a spectacular view of the fall foliage from an "above the trees" vantage point. Towers are located in Peninsula State Park in Fish Creek (newly built for 2019) and in Mountain Park on Washington Island.
- Rent a bike and explore the trails at one of our state parks or ride along the scenic back roads of the bucolic interior part of the peninsula. A back-road bike map is available through the Visitor Bureau.
- Enjoy the bounty of the fall harvest with locally grown and made products at more than two dozen farm markets and specialty food stores throughout the peninsula and on Washington Island.
